The Barnum of Picture Shows.

Sherman's Moving Pictures have been booked for an entire week at the Norway Opera House beginning Monday evening, Aug. 6, and the residents of this section are assured a week of exceptional amusement and instruction as this is recognized as the greatest exhibition of the kind in existence, playing all the latest cities of the East. Norway's good fortune in securing it for a week is due largely to the fact that it is a proprietor, Sherman E. Pike, is a Norway man having been born and raised here. He is the son of the late Prescott L. Pike, a lifelong resident of the town, who was widely known throughout this section.

Mr. Pike after leaving here became connected with several theaters and then went into the moving picture business, being one of the pioneers in that field of amusement. Being a man of original ideas he took the initiative rather than follow the beaten track and evolved so much that was new and inventive so many improvements that his exhibition rapidly forged to the front and he became known as the king of moving picture exhibitors. Through-out Connecticut and New York states he is always referred to as the Barnum of this particular line of amusement.

The exhibition will be put on here exactly as it is all the large cities and there will be an entire change of program every evening, something that no other exhibitor is able to produce for an entire week at a time. Manager Pike uses an electrograph which was made under his plans designed by himself. It is superior to any other machine in use and is absolutely fire-proof. When it was inspected and located by the chief inspector of Massachusetts he pronounced it the finest machine that had ever been brought to the State house at Boston for inspection. One valuable feature of this machine makes the pictures shown by other machines so difficult to watch. Every scene is absolutely steady and so realistically portrayed that one is almost convinced that he is looking at the actual scene of the work being shown. The pictures presented are

The views which will be shown here are widely varied and sure to please all tastes, and the entertainment is highly instructive as well as amusing and entertaining. For the first night the two special feature series will be a thrilling representation of Western life, "The Life of a Cowboy" and a highly amusing series entitled, "The Terrible Kids." This is one that particularly pleases the children. There will be many others and the views to be shown on the succeeding nights are equally pleasing.

In addition to the moving pictures there will be all the latest popular songs, beautifully illustrated with artistically colored views and sung by Harry Downing, a favorite New York tenor. Monday evening's songs will be "When the Whippoorwill Sings," "Marguerite," "Starlight" and "Only a Message from Home, Sweet Home." New songs will be sung each evening.

TORTURING PAIN.

Half This Man's Sufferings Would Have Killed Many a Person, But Doan's Cured Him.

Thousands of grateful people are telling every day how Doan's Kidney Pills cured them of distressing and dangerous kidney and bladder troubles.

Yet other thousands are suffering every day from these same ills. Why? They are either very negligent or very skeptical. Neglect of kidney disorders leads to dropsy, diabetes, Bright's disease and other fatal diseases.

Sincere, honest testimony like the following should convince every skeptic.

A. C. Sprague, stock dealer, of Normal, Ill., writes: "For two whole years I was doing nothing but buying medicines to cure my kidney troubles."

I do not think that any man ever suffered as I did and lived.

The pain in my back was so bad that I could not sleep at night. I could not ride a horse and sometimes was unable even to ride in a car. My condition was critical when I sent for Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and they cured me. Now I can go anywhere and do as much as anybody. I sleep well and feel no discomfort at all."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Sprague will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address: Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

The Maine Land.

There are lands that are fair and gems most in the kingdoms over the sea; There are mines of gold with their wealth shrouded in mystery;

There are skies that are blue and hearts that are true, By the Danube and the Rhine, But there is no other land like the "Maine" land.

And kneel at a Pagan shrine, But the best of all lands is the Maine land, The land of the cliff and the pine.

Many a hand has a palace grand That blooms on the pine-tree's side, Where the proud potatoes regales in state Settling nobility.

There are lands of the east where the heathen feast, And kneel at a Pagan shrine, But the best of all lands is the Maine land, The land of the cliff and the pine.

There are souls as sturdy and bold, Her laughter fair as the violets rare That bloom on the pine-tree's side, But for me there's no land like the Maine land, The land of the cliff and the pine.

Then ho! for the Maine land, the home land, Ke trunks wandered away, From her rushing rills, She's calling for you today.

For or the deep when the world is asleep In the stillness of your home and mine, In the dear land, the Maine land, The land of the cliff and the pine.

Cost of Living.

Anything can be proved by statistics. Doan's Kidney Pills are the poor of the mass of the people are growing actually poorer? The rich are growing richer. The magnitude of a few fortunes has made the possessor richer, relatively, than the great mass, that their predecessors were the "money-getters" to the mass of their day.

Let any man of middle age, in the most moderate circumstances, compare the conditions in his own immediate family now and in the time of his youth. The poor families now have a bathroom and running water; they have gas, and perhaps electric light for lighting, and in many instances a gas as well as a coal range for cooking; they have a heater in the cellar; they wear better clothes; they provide for themselves a diet which in variety and richness was unheard of a generation ago except among the really wealthy, and many of the things which a poor man uses today could not be produced by the rich of a generation ago because the very articles were not produced.

Has the cost of living increased? The cost of some of the necessities of life has increased within the past twenty years, as every housewife knows. But it is higher in many respects than it was, and higher in many respects than it is, but clothing and shoes and many other things are cheaper. But, assuming that the cost of the necessities has increased, the great increase of the cost of living is due to the actual increase in the cost of the articles, but to the indubitable fact that our wants, our desires and our habit of satisfying them and the variety of things within reach have grown to a tremendous rate.

Everybody buys potted plants and cut flowers, "Jack" and "Jill" are no longer rudely manufactured by his father, but costs $3; the laundry business has grown prodigiously; the street car companies reap millions from the persons who formerly walked, and all the people of America whose ambitions are illimitable want to ride in automobiles.

The trusts and monopolies have no doubt shown us too much of our rightfulness; many rapacious pirates are stealing from us very deftly by wholesale.

It is a period of extravagance. Men and especially the women of the working classes, dress better every day on the streets and in their homes than they used to for church or special or social functions.

A reporter recently took note of three young men seated in a bootblack establishment, where the price of a "shine" was ten cents. Each was smoking a ten-cent cigar, and all three went from bootblack to a barber, where each would spend ten cents more. The reporter subsequently ascertained that the average weekly wage of these young men was eight dollars.

Statistics from a large New England city show that one-tenth of the population owe debts that are not considered collectable. It is quite probable that if the reporter cited above had followed these young men still farther, he would have found them taking a street car for home or some other part of the city. At any rate, they were obviously spending money for luxury and appearance out of proportion to their incomes, and it is not to be doubted that they represent the manner of life of a large proportion of the people who owe uncollectable debts.

Some, of course, are careful of their expenditure and are saving from their earnings, for then the times are in reality good, but too many are indulging in comforts and luxuries that they can ill afford, and by so doing are making life miserable for themselves, while cheating others out of what is honestly their due.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at present no need of a search for a cure in all its stages, and that is certain. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, it cannot be cured by local remedies. It is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by rebuilding the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer the Hundred Dollar Reward for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Haying Time.

Founded on Fact.
That's heard about cutting "the hay." The question is settled daily. Since the stormy weather in May. "The madder" it'll be wetter'n thunder. "The drier" it'll be so high. "You can't get the hay cart over to haul hay out to dry." Thron h June there was daily inspection. Of the knolls and hollows afield. "Don't believe with so much wet weather. They'll be mown half a yield." The first of July, more rain fell. And louder grew the lamentations. "God darn it all what's to come." "Taint no use now to commence." But last week there was considerable hustling. That hay was "going to be cut." And run the risk of getting it. "Couldn't more'n a lay there'n rot." A man with a machine was hired. With a hay cart and horse rake too. And a man with a scythe, besides. To help see the "blamed thing through." Next day there assembled a caravan Of carts, and horses and men; There was raking, tumbling, sweating and grumbling; With a true story, now and then. With "geeing and hawing," a little loud talking. But the carts and rakes near covered the ground. (There's only five acres, they say.) On the piazza, with old rick back, "We're in great comfort, we smoke our pipe. The subject has changed, now the talk is "How long for the taters'll be ripe?" K.

How to Fry Bacon Properly.
There is no more universally popular breakfast dish than fried bacon, and many people can eat bacon that is properly cooked and daintily served when nothing else will tempt them. The great secret in cooking bacon is to have a clean frying pan, says the New York Journal. No pan should be used longer than six months. At the end of that time it should be discarded and a new one bought. As pans are very cheap, this will not be hard to do. Before putting the pan on the range see that the fire is clear and steady. Then put on the pan, and before putting the bacon in let the pan get quite hot. Cut the bacon in thin slices and turn it as the edges begin to curl. If there is much liquid grease in the pan, pour it off, as the bacon will grow sordid if allowed to remain in it. Have the dish on which the bacon is to be served piping hot and garnished with a little parsley. This will make a very tempting breakfast dish.

How to Remove Grease From Hands.
Preparation that will remove grease and stains from the hands is this, which should not be used if there are cuts, as it will burn intensely: Cut into small bits an ounce of any nice laundry soap and dissolve it in an ounce of fresh lemon juice. It may be necessary to warm the juice to do this, in which case put the liquids in a small bowl and set into a saucepan of boiling water until the soap is dissolved. Remove from the heat and add one-half ounce of oil of bitter almonds, one-half ounce of glycerin and a quarter ounce of carbonate of potassium. Use as you would soap, rubbing it first well into the hands before applying water.

How to Preserve Green or Wax Beans.
A good way for preserving green or wax beans is to soak the beans for a few hours in cold water or parboil them slightly, says Good Housekeeping. Cut them in long, thin slices and pack in large jars with generous layers of salt between the layers. When the jar is full cover with a cloth and put on a weighted plate to keep the beans in the brine. They should keep perfectly until spring.

How to Build Up Shattered Nerves.
People who are ill or out of sorts or run down ought to have jams, honey, good candy and appetizing sweets of every description. Sugar is a nerve builder and a muscle builder. Nerve people are never great eaters of sugar, and they would be stronger if they took more sweets. Those who take sufficient sweets into their composition are always hardy of nerve and strong of muscle.

How to Cook Catfish.
Most lovers of catfish like it fried in cornmeal and boiling hard, with adjuncts of corn bread and hot coffee, but stuffed and baked is a delicious meat has hardly a superior among fresh water fish, says Outing. Sliced and broiled, with a basting of butter, black pepper and salt and served with egg sauce, it is simply delicious, or, if one's taste runs to court bouillon or stew, it is equally good. Catch a few and try them and see if this opinion is not correct.

OXFORD.

Oxford, 16; Wildmere, 2.
It was like finding money for the Oxford to wallop the Wildmeres at Oxford, Saturday, and they let them off easy by making the score 16 to 2. There was never any chance for the visiting aggregation, and they were rounded up by the champions in the simplest manner possible.

It was a woeful exhibition for the good crowd of fans who hoped to see the Wildmeres put up a strong game, and the worst part of it was the way the Oxford boys piled up the runs at the outset, as the game was won in the first couple of innings, and the only interest remaining in the result, was the size of the score the Oxford desired.

After playing two innings and getting such a lead that nothing short of an earthquake could disturb their position, the Oxford did not have to exert themselves, and the string out saving energy.

Clark, the Wesleyan star, was an easy mark for the Oxford, and they kept penetrating his delivery all through the contest, but lighted on him particularly hard when he first made his appearance. He was several notches off form and kept the local dodging his wild shots.

On the other hand, Adams went along like well oiled machinery, and his men backed him up with equal constancy. Bearce relieved Adams in the sixth, Bowler catching and Adams taking second. Arthur Walker is to be commended for his brilliant fielding at first the last three innings. Bowler's fielding was of major league calibre.

Score by innings:
Oxford.....1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9-16
Earned runs, Oxford 8; Wildmere 1. Two-base hits, Clayson; three-base hits, Adams; struck out by Adams 8, by Bearce 3, by Clark 3; first base on balls of Adams, 2; Umpire, J. H. Chick. Time, 1 hour, 45 min. Attendance, 200.

The Grand Trunk issued an order, which went into effect last Sunday at 9 o'clock a. m., to the effect that there after all trains on double tracks would be run on the right hand track instead of the left hand track as formerly. This has always, or for many years at least, been the custom on United States railways, but in Canada the custom has up to the present, been exactly the reverse. It would appear that the Canadian way was the best, as it brings the engineers on the inside and gives them an unobstructed view of both tracks, but the company doubtless has good reasons for thinking the Yankee way the best, hence the change.

Union Temperance Meeting.

Following is the program as carried out at the Union Temperance Meeting held last Sunday evening, at the Universalist church, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., with the president, Mrs. Ella M. Bates, in the chair:

Voluntary Evening Song—Jennie M. Brown Song and praise service—Rev. Thos. Whiteside Duet, Mother's Hymn to Mr.

Psalm, God of the Open Air—Minnie E. Lane

A few well chosen words concerning our prohibitory law and the desire for resubmission, was given by the president, which was followed with singing by a chorus of 25 children. "We March to Victory," a procession with blue cross flags and a prohibition banner in white with blue letters.

A recitation by Maynard Chase, "No High License," to which the chorus responded at the close of each verse, while displaying banner and flags:

"No high license, no high license, Is the watchword of our war, Give us always prohibition, Prohibition everywhere."

After which the chorus sang, "Stand up for Prohibition," to the tune of "Stand up for Jesus," accompanied by the congregation, and then the chorus marched back to their seats. They looked very pretty, sang sweetly and performed the whole without a break, but best of all, they were previously taught the meaning of the big words "Prohibition" and "High License."

Rev. E. R. Verrill made a few appropriate remarks on "The Prosperity of the State of Maine under the Prohibition Law."

Rev. Isabella S. Macduff spoke upon her experience under the license law in the State of New Hampshire. Of those who have heard of last two speakers, and there was a good house full present, not one could have with honesty preferred the latter condition of affairs.

The meeting closed with a solo by Alice Barden, and a postlude, "Onward Christian Soldiers," by the organist.

Alice Barden's song, so sweetly and ably rendered for so young a girl, is given below.

Will it Pay?

Out from the hearthstone the children go, Fair as the sunshine, pure as the snow; A license wrong on a crowded street, Pass from the coming of the guileless feet.

Child of the rich, and child of the poor, Pass to their wreck through the drain shops Oh, say, will they ever come back as they go, Fair as the sunshine, pure as the snow?

Out from the hearthstone the children fair, Pass from the breath of a mother's prayer; Shall a father's vote on a crowded street, Consent to the snare for the thoughtless feet? Ah! fathers, your finest gold grows dim, Black with the rust of such nameless sin! Oh, say, will your dearest ones come back as they go, Fair as the sunshine, pure as the snow?

SOUTHEAST SWEDEN.

Ball Game. Camp Katahdin played the second game of ball with Long Lake Lodge of North Bridgton, at the grounds of the former in Sweden, the 24th. About twenty young ladies from the sister camp at Bridgton came up to root for the home boys, but it was no use, for after the third inning, the visitors had it all their own way, the Katahdin's not seeing better after the third inning. Holt went into the box for the Katahdin, the Long Lake Lodge after a few wild throws, finally settling down to steady work, and doing the trick to the tune of 20 to 4, the Katahdin's throwing up the sponge in the eighth inning with one man out.

One feature of the game was Ridlon's catch on third, when with bases full, the L. L. L. were sending men round in one, two, three order, he covered the short stop position, roped in a fly, putting the Katahdin's out, stopping the slaughter. Score by innings:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7—Total.
L. L. L. .... 3 4 3 0 3 2 6—20
Katahdin .... 1 0 3 0 0 0 1

The Story of Father John's

A Story Everyone Should Read, True and Full of Human Interest.

Half a century ago, Rev. Father John O'Brien of St. Patrick's Parish Lowell, Mass., through overwork and exposure, became seriously run down. A cold and stubborn cough and lung trouble threatened his life. An eminent specialist gave Father John, as he was fondly called, a prescription to cure the cold and remove the lung trouble as well as to build up and strengthen the body. The clergyman began to improve at once, the cough disappeared and his lungs healed. It corrected his digestion, made new tissue and Father John was soon restored to his former health and strength.

Father John recommended the medicine to his parishioners and friends, and because of its merits it became the family remedy in thousands of homes, and became known as "Father John's Medicine," having been so named by the people, and was advertised, all with the approval of Father John.

If taken faithfully it will cure all throat and lung troubles, prevent Pneumonia and Consumption, and make flesh and strength.

NOTE—Father John's Medicine is not a patent medicine and does not contain alcohol or poisonous drugs. Read guarantees which follow:

$25,000 GUARANTEE. As a guarantee that the story of Father John's Medicine is absolutely true, the sum of $25,000 will be given to any charitable institution if it can be shown otherwise. Also it is further guaranteed that if Father John's Medicine does not do all that we claim for it, your money will be refunded.

Maine as a Carrier Consumer.

I see by the papers that Maine has become the dumping ground for all the refuse that the western meat packers have to put up in tin cans and labels sets in "chilliest." Now that Massachusetts is trying to clean up and drive the getting rich on fines imposed on the small dealers who handle it, it is coming to us in car loads, and Maine, dear old Maine, is consuming it all and longing for more.

"Oh, Hayseed dear, did you hear the news that's going round?"

The canned-meat men have made our State their public dumping ground. No more will other states consume them. They can tell by our buzzards.

They can tell by our breath. And he took me by the hand. And he boasted of old Driggs. He claimed her motto means "to lead." Consuming canned garbage (?) On meat that's turning green.

Bits of Philosophy.

By the Professor.

The longer I live the more firmly convinced I become that philosophy is one of the great aids to a tranquil state of mind. Circumstances and conditions of time which are of the state of mind, and accidents occur at unexpected times which are of the state of mind, and often of such seeming magnitude as to discourage further effort on our part unless we view the situation philosophically.

Some years ago I witnessed an accident in which a man's leg was crushed so seriously that amputation was necessary. "How fortunate," exclaimed the victim of the casualty, "that I did not lose both legs." That was stoic philosophy. It was common-sense, too. Weep and lamenting is of no practical service. The thing has occurred. It is best and wisest to turn the bright side, while it is the bright side, and to find some comfort in surmising how it would appear if revealed.

Worry over matters beyond our control; anger at deeds committed by others; and for which we are in no way responsible, are both foolish and injurious. A man who worries is neither happy nor healthy. The Irishman had the right idea when he had difficulty in extracting a cork from a bottle. "Can't you pull it, Mike," said Pat. "Sure I'll pull it," said Mike, "if I have to push it in."

There is a form of mental disease, says Humanity, which may be designated as retrospection. The mind is turned upon itself, or at the best toward the body. Now neither the mind nor body was ever intended to be an object of worship or constant study. The external world and all that there is in it was intended for our thought and contemplation. There are many whose minds have dwelt so much upon their bodies that the lives of others, and the lives of themselves, are always present. In some instances this morbidness leads directly to the acquisition of certain forms of illness. Let the mind be directed upon the world of people and interests outside of self and there will be health and more normal activity of all the functions, than if we constantly study our shortcomings, either real or fancied. And it is only by taking a cheerful and contented view of the world around that we can acquire and maintain that healthy face and expression which is the indelible mark of self-control and education.

The same law exists for the man of talent as for the man who digs the street—laziness means failure and industry success.

We are more dependent on the electricity in the air than the food we put in our mouths. Leave your windows open at night. Night air is the only kind we have after sundown, and we cannot have too much pure air.

As it is better to lie compressed in a narrow bed and be healthy than to be tossed with disease on a broad couch, so also it is better to contract yourself within a small competence and be happy than to have a great fortune and be wretched.

It is not poverty which produces sorrow, but desire; nor does wealth release from fear, but the power of reasoning. If then you acquire this power of reasoning you will neither desire wealth nor complain of poverty.

Neither is a horse elated or proud of manger and trappings and coverings, nor a bird of his little shreds of cloth and of his nest, but both of them are proud of his swiftness, one proud of the swiftness of the feet, and the other of the wings. Do not also then be greatly proud of your food and dress, and in short, of any external things, but be proud of your integrity and good deeds.

As a goose is not frightened by cackling nor a sheep by bleating, so let not the clamor of a senseless multitude alarm you.

As the sun does not wait for prayers and incantations to be induced to rise, but immediately shines and is salutary to all; so do you also not wait for clappings of hands, and shouts and praise to be induced to do good, but be a doer of good voluntarily, and you will be loved as much as the sun.

When Thales was asked what is most universal, he answered, Hope, for he stays with those who have nothing else.

The Bravest of Braves.

"The male spider is the bravest and most demonstrative of all lovers. He approaches the female, runs round her a few times in little circles, and then begins a violent and oriental dance. He twirls round and round, drawing in his legs; he writhes and crawls serpentine along the ground, straightening his legs and sucking his body, he towers above the lady grandly."

"And the mischief of it is that the female spider is always stronger than the male, and, when his dance is done, she either accepts him for her mate, or else, faking upon him fiercely, she tears him to pieces."

"Imagine a human lover trying to please his mistress with the knowledge in his heart that, if he failed, he would be murdered. His efforts would be lukewarm and distant."

"Yet the humble spider, whom we are accustomed to despise, dances, death staring him in the face, with a gayety, a warmth, and an abandon seldom to be met with north of Africa."

The Panama canal isn't quite complete but it will float two per cent. bonds all right.

The State insurance commissioner shows that during the year the total amount of risks written in Maine was $150,000,000.

There is nothing new under the sun, and paper handkerchiefs which some physicians are advocating to supersede the linen handkerchiefs in common use, come from Japan where they have been in use for centuries. The paper handkerchief is soft and thick and strong and looks like silk. It costs a cent—less than the cost of laundering linen handkerchiefs. The linen handkerchief, physicians agree, is the most dangerous article in the human wardrobe. It swarms with billions of germs of consumption and grip and pneumonia, and hence instead of being laundered it should be destroyed. But it can't be destroyed it is too expensive. The paper handkerchief is destroyed. It is thrown into the fire. The rarity of consumption in Japan is attributed to the same show of justice to the exclusive use of paper handkerchiefs by the Japanese.

Cramps and Swimming.

Without doubt it would be well for every one to know how to swim. There may come a time to any one when it will be a matter of life or death. In relation to swimming and making light of cramps a writer has said: "Cramps are rare on land, and there is no good reason to think that they happen in water as often as they are given as a cause of death. There is nothing necessarily fatal about cramps, even when they occur in the water. Cramps do not alter specific gravity, and those who cannot swim can float, even if they really have cramps, instead of thinking they have them and losing their heads from fright. Death from cramps is often due to loss of presence of mind, or heart disease, or from going into deadly peril through the first confidence."

In the first place, cramps are not rare on land, as almost any one knows from personal experience. In the next place, while it is true that "cramps do not alter specific gravity," it is also true that when they occur in the water they most mightily lessen one's chances of getting ashore alive.

A few years ago a good swimmer while a long distance out in the lake, was taken with a cramp which drew his left leg to his body and made it feel as if tied in a knot. He had a wife and children, and a strong desire to live. Being skilful in the water, he kept afloat until the muscles relaxed, the leg straightened out, and he swam ashore. But it was not that day this, although fond of the pastime, he had a plank at ease when in water beyond his depth, unless trustworthy assistance was near at hand in case of a repetition of his frightful experience. Cramps "do not alter specific gravity," but they alter everything else while they exist.

The art of swimming should be encouraged. It is in itself a delightful pastime, and it may at any time become useful in the saving of one's own life or the lives of others. But no good can come from belittling the dangers that are inseparable from its enjoyment. Rather the lesson should be inculcated everywhere that no reasonable precaution should be neglected. Many a few seconds' delay in the water, saved if there had been a boat, a plank, a rope, or even a clear-headed companion at hand in the moment when his trouble came upon him, whether due to cramp or any other cause of temporary disability.

To Cook Peas and String Beans.

"How long do you cook string beans?" I asked.

"How long do you cook them?" Mrs. Sparker asked.

"Three-quarters of an hour to an hour," I replied. She was silent so long that I looked up to find her gazing at me with scorn to deep for words.

"Three-quarters of an hour to an hour," she repeated at last. "Why don't you serve them raw and save trouble?"

"Why I—I thought they did not need much cooking."

"You thought wrong, then," she answered shortly.

"Now," she went on, looking at me sternly over her glasses, "the next time you cook string beans, you cook them four hours, do you hear? Four solid hours—and when they have been cooking three hours put in some salt."

Hearty plenty of water so they won't burn, but it is better to have the water boil down quite low so the beans won't taste flat. When the four hours are up, pour off the water and fix 'em up with butter and some sweet milk or cream, let 'em set on the back of the stove while they keep hot for a few minutes, then stir 'em up and turn 'em out into a dish. You'll have some string beans worthy the name then, you do as I tell you," she ended almost fiercely.

"I will," I promised, I said meekly.

"But when it comes to green peas," said Mrs. Sparker, "that is another matter. Nearly everyone cooks peas too long. Don't cook them but twenty minutes or half an hour at the very most. You've got to have good judgment to cook peas and know by the taste when they are done. You want to salt 'em after they have cooked fifteen minutes, and you want to cook 'em in as little water as you can and not have 'em burn. There ought not to be hardly any water left when they are done, but what there is you want to pour almost all away. Then fix 'em up with cream or milk and butter, and—"

she hesitated, looked about her, then bending nearer said in a low voice, "I wouldn't tell everybody, but you want to put in just a tiny pinch of sugar."

She settled back in her chair again and spoke in her natural voice. "If you do as I say and then don't have good peas, it will be because the peas were too old before they were picked, or else have been too long off the vines. You don't want to pick 'em the night before, but pick 'em and get 'em shelled and to cooking just as quick as you can."

"When you get to have good peas, you don't say anything about it, but I suppose you put in some pepper."

"Pepper?" Mrs. Sparker glared at me. "I don't use any pepper."

"What do you use?"

"No, not any. I want my vegetables cooked right and seasoned with good cream and butter, and I don't have to cover up my shortcomings and ruin the flavor of the vegetables with pepper."

I felt that it was time to go. I had a notion that I was treading on dangerous ground, so I said good afternoon and went quietly down the walk.

"Pepper indeed?" I heard her mutter, and once in a tone of fine scorn, "Pepper!"

Stay Till the End.

"The first day I was sent to school I went home at recess, thinking school was out."

"As I have grown older I find that a whole lot of people did the same thing, and the sad part of the affair is that too many of us never went back. In this life be careful that you don't go home at recess. If you start to learn a trade or profession, stay by it and master it. Don't chase away at recess. If you have a business attend to it and—don't go home at recess. This going home at recess has sent a man into bankruptcy, and it has caused another's tears to flow, and a mother's heart to ache. It has made a crusty old bachelor and a sour old maid. It has filled worlds with ignorance and made barren deserts of plains. Going home at recess means that you have failed asleep at the switch, and your train has plunged into the ditch. Always stay until school is out."

Material for Pillows.

From now to late autumn the woods and fields are replete with varied and desirable material for filling pillows, and a search through our magazines will usually be rewarded with designs for a pillow covering well adapted for these fillings. Although any design one fancies can be used as a pillow covering.

During summer vacations or on walks about the farm a basket filled with catnip blossoms, these spread out thinly and dried in the shade, makes what a small gift friend of ours call "a headache pillow," and persons subject to sick headache find such a pillow quite as soothing as a cup of hot catnip tea and more easily applied.

Those to whom the odor of dried hops is not offensive will find a hop pillow also soothing to the nerves and conducive to sleep. Covering for such a pillow would be artistic in black upholstery's sateen decorated with clusters of hops in their natural colors, either with needle or brush.

Milkweed pods gathered after the seeds have ripened, the husks after seeds removed, make a very fluffy pillow if gathered when fully ripe. They must be plucked apart and can be put at once in the pillow; a few seeds and inside of the husks will be found in the pillow, and a strong desire to live. Being skilful in the water, he kept afloat until the muscles relaxed, the leg straightened out, and he swam ashore. But it was not that day this, although fond of the pastime, he had a plank at ease when in water beyond his depth, unless trustworthy assistance was near at hand in case of a repetition of his frightful experience. have been vexed when using cream of tartar and soda to find their work uneven. If sometimes good, at others the biscuit and cake will be heavy or sour or full of lumps of soda that set the teeth on edge. Flour, eggs and butter wasted. This is because the cream of tartar is adulterated or cannot be used in the proper proportions.
